

LOUGH ERNE

These maps are intended for cruisers and yachts with a draft of 2' (61 cm) or more.

Water areas shown in RED are not navigable to cruisers unless the crew has good local knowledge, but they can be explored in a dinghy or small craft in good weather.

Water areas shown in PINK can be normally navigated with caution by cruisers if the water level is 150' OD or more in the Lower Lough and 151' OD or more in the Upper Lough which is considered to be average summer level. If the water levels are below these figures, areas shown in PINK must not be entered. Information, regarding water levels, is available at any of the Erne Charter Boat Association's bases or from the Department of Agriculture (Drainage Division) or from the Lock Keeper at Portora locks.

Always give the points of islands a wide berth: do not go close to islands unless there is a recognised jetty. If you wish to visit an island without a jetty do so in your dinghy and anchor the cruiser well offshore.

Part of Lough Erne, particularly the expanse of water north and north-west of a line between Inishmacsaint and Rossigh, will be rough in strong winds.

DO NOT cut corners or 'hug' markers.

Keep to midstream in rivers or between islands wherever possible.

There is ample headroom for all cruisers on the main navigation, but sailing yachts will have to lower their masts to get under bridges and most overhead power lines. HR of HT cables. (NOTE). Usually not less than 8 meters.

It is unsafe to secure a vessel to fishing stands which are of light construction and have shallow approaches.

There is no charge made for passage through Portora Lock (Enniskillen).
